

7 Biscuits Worth Waking Up for in San Diego

By Darlene Horn | June 28, 2016

Biscuits are breaking out. No longer a side note to an otherwise lovely meal, biscuits at San Diego restaurants are having their moment in the spotlight, from breakfast right through to dinner. Flaky, golden and comforting, biscuits are getting their due as the main squeeze in sandwiches and they're shining bright when served near-naked with just the right butters and jams. Read on for seven of our favorite ways to enjoy biscuits in San Diego.

- Fried avocado biscuit at True North Tavern

We've sung the praises of the Smashbrown Biscuit at this North Park restaurant before, but don't miss the smaller-but-equally-delicious sibling that's served as a slider. It's the same homestyle biscuit, but it's filled with fried avocado, balsamic onions, arugula, tomato and garlic aioli. Each order comes with two sliders and a pile of tots on the side.

3815 30th St.; 619-291-3815